BUSINESS LEADERS HONOR J. M. GIDDING

500 Merchants and Personal Friends Wish Him Success in His New Building.

BANQUET AT THE PLAZA

John Wanamaker Among the Many Sending Greetings-Praise by Prominent Men.

Five hundred of the business and peranal friends of J. M. Gidding, meeting at dinner last night at the Hotel Plaza, paid their compliments to Mr. Gidding and wished him success in his new building in Fifth avenue, between Fiftysixth and Fifty-seventh streets, which will be opened to the public next Tues-

Speakers referred to the business career of Mr. Gidding, which began thirty years ago, when he was selling newspapers in Scrapton, Pa. They also praised the qualities which, they said, made possible the position he has achieved since he came to this city eleven years ago. And Mr. Gidding himself, when the other speakers had finished, said: V-

"I believe that men are moved by "I believe that men are moved by much the same impulses, the same motives, that moved them when they were children, and the matter of building reputation always has been very serious to me. It should be serious to every young man in business. And to those young men who are in the first few years of their business careers I want to say, and say entphatically, that there is just as much chance to do great things now as there was twenty years ago. Avenue President Wilson May Change Its Name

Special Cable to The New York Herald Copyright, 1921, by The New York Herald New York Herald Bureau. } Paris, Dec. 30. HE name of the Avenue President Wilson may be changed to Ayenue President Harding if a proposal which the Seine Council is now debating is adopted. The proposal is that the names of streets and avenues in Paris dedicated to famous people be kept up to date. Thus when a new King succeeds King George V. the name of the present avenue called after him would be changed accordingly. All Paris streets without exception if the proposal is adopted, will named after celebrities, those in one quarter after artists, in other after statesmen, &c., to give a clew to the location of streets in this city, something that European cities now notably lack.
